

Masses

Masses

- This suggests that the main mass loss occurs in the transition of RGB to HB
- If this is true, it also could shed some light on another characteristic found in GCs, has been found that second generation of stars are less common in AGB phase (this could be due to stars avoiding this stage because of mass loss)